UCHS Class of '24 sends 222 graduates into world

Blue skies, a few clouds and a cool breeze greeted the record number of graduates who took to the football field in Mike Colwell Memorial Stadium for the Union County High School Class of 2024 Commencement Exercises the evening of Friday, May 24.

Stormy weather just hours earlier had threatened to upend the graduation schedule, but fortunately, everything cleared up in time for the ceremony to occur as planned and the celebratory fireworks to launch at the end of the night.

Donning purple caps and gowns, the 222 graduates began taking their seats around 8 p.m.

The event was staged differently this year, with graduates and speakers facing the end zones instead of the home bleachers to accommodate viewing for guests sitting on either side of the field.

After the "Pomp and Circumstance," the UCHS Advanced Ensemble Choir officially kicked off graduation with a patriotic performance of "The Star-Spangled Banner," followed by Senior Class Vice President Addi Scott welcoming everyone to the graduates' big night.

Scott thanked families and friends, teachers and coaches, and all other school staff for preparing the students to strike out on their own in pursuit of "the incredible adventures that await us."

She also shared academic successes as measured in scholarships, with the Class of 2024 receiving "over $7 million in national and state aid, as well as school and institution-sponsored and local scholarships to attend trade schools, colleges and universities throughout the nation."

"At this time, we'd like to gratefully recognize our classmates who have enlisted in our nation's armed forces," Scott said, asking Derrick Baughman, Luke Mallette, Andrew Brown, Nolan Thompson, Coleson Derberry, Samuel Hegel, and Gabriel Panter to stand for applause.

Graduates Lara Turner and Morgan Warren stepped up to the podium next to take their fellow classmates on a 13-year trip down memory lane, from primary school to pandemic times and on through to "one of your proudest memories as a student of Union County Schools" – graduation.

Describing the occasion as both bittersweet and remarkably joyous, their recollections had the effect of demonstrating a preview of life to come after graduation, to be similarly filled with "successes, failures, victories, losses, heartbreaks and happiness."

Woody Gap School graduates ready for life's next steps

SUCHES – Six Woody Gap seniors received diplomas on Saturday, May 25, inside the school's gymnasium during the 10 a.m. graduation exercises.

Alissa Cantrell, Dixie Lee, Jennifer Marsh, James Sorrells, Aidan Webb and Haylie Woody were recognized by family, friends and faculty during their big day, which included a Salutatory Address by Webb and Marsh's Valedictory Address.

Marsh opened by thanking everyone in attendance before delving into what Woody Gap School means to her.

"Woody Gap is known for being a small school nestled in the mountains, unheard of by most people," Marsh said. "While some may view this as a limitation, it is what makes Woody Gap more than a school."

"It's a family – a community where everyone knows your name and where support is only a call away. It's a place that many of us have called home since our formative elementary years and experienced a wide scope of emotions that formed our experiences."

She went on to describe Woody Gap as "a breath of fresh air" in a world that often feels "chaotic and overwhelming."

"Here, we've learned that it's not the size of the school or the number of students that matters, but instead the little, unique moments we are fortunate enough to experience," Marsh said.

Continuing, "As we stand on the edge of a new chapter in our lives, let us carry with us the lessons we've learned at Woody Gap. Let us remember the importance of community, of lending a helping hand to those in need, and of finding joy in the present."

Asking that her fellow graduates "carry the spirit of Woody Gap with us wherever we go," she further beseeched the Class of 2024 to be "models of kindness, empathy and compassion in a world that sorely needs it."

Dyer looks to future after winning sheriff's election

By Shawn Jarrard
North Georgia News
editor@nganews.com

Come 2025, there will be a new sheriff in town: Shawn Dyer.

Dyer didn't just win this May 21 General Primary Election for Union County Sheriff; he won in dramatic fashion, earning a clear mandate with 70% of the vote in a three-way contest.

And with no Democrat challengers qualifying this year, Dyer is guaranteed to win in the Nov. 5 General Election and will be sworn in as the new sheriff next January. For receiving the opportunity to protect and serve in a greater capacity, Dyer is incredibly thankful.

"I am very humble about the voters' support and enthusiasm," Dyer said. "It See Dyer Next Sheriff, Page 2A

Farmers Market to return for new season on June 1

By Brittany Holbrooks
North Georgia News
Staff Writer

It's that time of year again – the Union County Farmers Market is set to open for the 2024 season on Saturday, June 1 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Alongside the always popular produce, good eats and homemade crafts will be some new features for the community to look forward to this year.

Coinciding with the opening of the main event is Georgia Beef Day, sponsored by the Chestatee-Chattahoochee Resource Conservation and Development Council, Brasstown Beef and Nelson Tractor. The first 500 visitors can nab a hamburger, and families can enjoy activities for kids.

Already, 71 vendors have signed up to bring products to See Farmers Market, Page 2A

Cleveland Street paving begins downtown this week

By Shawn Jarrard
North Georgia News
editor@nganews.com

The Union County Commissioner's Office wants residents to know that paving will be taking place in Downtown Blairsville starting this week, which will impact traffic near the square as flagger crews move people around the road construction.

On behalf of the City of Blairsville, the county has contracted with Colditz Trucking to pave Cleveland Street inside city limits. The first phase of the project was completed last year, and the second phase between Veterans Memorial Drive and the square crosswalk is beginning now.

In addition to paving, the project will include new sidewalks, curbing and gutters, with all work to be reimbursed by the city to the tune of $378,868.15.

The project could take a month or more to complete, weather pending, though the county will have an updated timeline for the public after the roadwork gets underway. There will be no official detour around construction.

"If people don't have to come through the center of town, they can use Shoe Factory Road (to bypass the construction area), or when they come down Cleveland Street, they can use Hunt-Martin Street (as a detour)," County Manager Larry Garrett said, asking for motorists' patience.

Once the Cleveland Street project wraps up, Colditz Trucking will begin asphalt resurfacing for the 10.56 miles of county roadway authorized in this year's list of roads to be paved with Local Maintenance and Improvement Grant, or LMIG, funds.

The 12-road list includes the entire 0.66 miles of Fisher Field Road; 2 miles of Gaddistown Road from the start of Georgia 60; 1.1 miles of Ivy Log Road from Henson Road to the Ivy Log Creek box culvert;

0.81 miles of Ivy Log Creek Road from Gumlog Road to Ivy Log Gap Road; 0.15 miles of Lance Crossing from Moccasin Road to Spring Creek Road; 1 mile of Loving Road from Mull Road to the county line; 0.67 miles of Fairview Church Road from Mulkey Gap Road to the Duncan Cemetery; and all of Old Smokey Road, Spring Creek Road, Weaver Road, Darby Lane and Wilson Mountain Road.

LMIG funds are provided yearly by the Georgia Department of Transportation to help counties offset local paving costs, and as explained in a recent commission meeting, See City Paving, Page 4A was amazing how well the community supported what I'm doing and will do and believe in me, and I hope to do them one of the best jobs they've ever seen done here as the next sheriff in this county.

"I'm not going to let this job change the way I treat people or any of that. I hope to be very humble to the day I do retire. And that's the way I'm going to run that office."

Addressing residents, property owners and business owners, Dyer said he looks forward to keeping Union County "the best place to live in the world."

"We're going to do that by making sure that they are protected to the best of our ability," Dyer said. "Anything that they need or have concerns with, I want them to reach out to me and tell me, and we'll do what we can to make sure that we meet their needs."

Regarding his priorities as sheriff, Dyer said people can expect him to stick to his campaign promises.

"I'm going to increase the manpower in our Narcotics Unit, and we're going to be hitting the ground running on that right after the first of the year or before," Dyer said. "And our community relations are going to be amped up even more."

"People are going to be seeing a lot more community relations and community policing. The citizens will see positive effects from me obtaining this office."

Dyer currently serves as third-in-command of the Union County Sheriff's Office as well as Assistant Chief of the Blairsville Police Department, giving him a unique perspective on interagency cooperation, which is something that is very important to him.

"Cooperation with other agencies is going to be stronger than it's ever been," Dyer said. "I've spoken with all the surrounding sheriffs, and they are looking very forward to working with me."

"We're going to be making some plans to work together in different areas, especially the drug-related areas and our investigation areas, to not only help our county but to help other counties, and they will help us back."

"The relationship between the Sheriff's Office and the Police Department has changed law enforcement here in Union County - it's made it better. And if we can get that same relationship with every county that surrounds us, it'll make our law enforcement even better again, and that's my goal."

Added Dyer, "Whether it's school, city, county - we've basically got the same function, even in the different counties. We've all got one job to do, and if we all work together, it makes it a lot easier."

"And Union County Schools can expect a super good relationship, because we're there to protect their kids just the same as they are, and we'll do whatever it takes to make sure that happens."

To fully embrace his role as sheriff, Dyer will be leaving his position with Blairsville PD later this year before he has to attend sheriff training in November. In the meantime, he will be taking steps to ensure the Police Department is ready for his departure when the time comes.

"Chief (Michael 'Bear') Baxter and all the employees at Blairsville Police Department are top notch, and they will continue to be top notch," Dyer said.

Of course, Dyer would like to thank his current boss at the Sheriff's Office, Sheriff Mack Mason, for the leadership he has provided in building the agency to what it is today, and Dyer will be actively working to not only safeguard Mason's legacy but expand on it as well.

"Mack Mason has taken this department to a very professional department, and it's going to be hard for me to top that," Dyer said. "He's made my job really easy because I don't have to build anything, I just have to continue and improve what we've got."

"I have the utmost respect for that man. He's led this department with the department first, and I'll do the same thing. His guys' needs are more important than his, and that's the way I feel, too."

Added Dyer, "He's given us a department where we've got what we need, and now, we can excel by improving in technology and things like that to take our department to the next level."

Reflecting on the election and his landslide victory, Dyer said he knew before he got in the race that he was going to run a completely clean and positive campaign, and he believes that helps explain the overwhelming voter response he enjoyed.

"I sat down with my family before I made the announcement that I was going to run for sheriff, and my daughter told me, 'Dad, I want you to do this, but I just want you to be dad, just like you always are,'" Dyer said. "I promised then that I would run the campaign like that, and that's what I did."

"I didn't waver from it, not one bit. I didn't sling mud in my Facebook, the newspaper, or my public speeches. And in my dealings with the public, I refused to speak badly about my opponents, and I didn't waver from that."

"And this campaign, with a 70% mark, I think that future politicians should probably look at that and maybe run clean campaigns, because it pays off."

Looking ahead, Dyer said he can't wait to do his job and look after the county as sheriff, especially given the tremendous support this community expresses for law enforcement.

"That's the thing that really makes a police department or a sheriff's office or anybody succeed, is the community support," Dyer said. "And here in Union County, we've had really good community support at both agencies."

"Without that, it makes our job really hard, but with it, it makes our job a lot easier. And I want to see the community really get behind us and get involved with us, so we're going to work on that a lot to create a good relationship."

the Farmers Market, and new in 2024 are the tents set up between the sheds to house "walk-up" vendor traffic as needed, or new sellers who approach on short notice.

"At the end of last year, we were averaging I'd say 25 walk-ups (daily)," recalled Market Manager Dustin "The Rog" Rogers, explaining that the tents primarily serve seasonal vendors.

Rather than asking these sellers to show up earlier or improvise their placement, they can just set up shop in an unoccupied seasonal tent.

An even bigger deal is the new special event area, located beside the Union County Canning Plant. This area will serve as the primary staging ground for Beef Day and any other events that happen while the Farmers Market is in full swing this season, to last through the end of October.

"It's just a new space that we're going to utilize," said Market Staff Aliceyn

Covington. "It's going to have different things going on, and we'll advertise for whatever we have there on Facebook (and) on the website."

Education will also have its place on opening day, and the Blue Ridge Mountain Soil and Water Conservation District will be offering small lessons on local ecology in the new area.

At 9 a.m., presenters will talk about honeybees and other local pollinators. At 10:15 a.m., folks can learn about the various animals that call creek ecosystems home. Stick around until 11:15 a.m., and you might enjoy a forestry demonstration.

Meanwhile, the historic Hunter-England Cabin Homestead will now offer tours on Saturdays, complete with new occupants. Dorsey Dockery of the Byron Herbert Reece Heritage Farm will be bringing his animals up to the property, with specific mention of a donkey, goats and sheep.

The Union County Canning Plant officially opens on July 6. Guests interested in utilizing the facility can stop by for an open house on the Saturday before the big day on June 29. Market and cannery staff will be available to answer questions and give pointers on how to start preserving homegrown produce available for purchase at the Farmers Market.

The Farmers Market is located at 290 Farmers Market Way in Blairsville, just beyond the Aldi Grocery Store. Hours of operation will be every Saturday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and every Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. now through October.

Iota Iota chapter of Beta Sigma Phi International celebrate Founder's Day and announce 2024 Officers

Jeanee McJilton, Robin Zimmerman, Carolyn Southard, Kathy Ross, Jan Valencia, Kathy Adams, Jennifer Weber, Tammy Hayden, Denise Long, Lois Wiley, Sally Shuck, & Helen Teboe

The sisters in Iota Iota chapter of Beta Sigma Phi International met on Tuesday, May 21st at Branan Lodge to celebrate Founder's Day and have a small business meeting. Hostesses Robin Zimmerman and Jennifer Weber provided a delicious meal of salad, chicken casserole, garlic rolls, plus strawberry and blueberry bread, steamed carrots and cookies. A cake with the theme logo was made by Walmart which was delicious.

After partaking of food Helen Teboe called the meeting to order. Helen read the Founder's Day Pledge and Kathy Ross read the theme for 2024-25 - "Beta Sigma Phi the Right Place to Be." Pins which had been our late President Lynda Keener who passed away in 2021 were given out by her sister Kathy Ross to the current officers. Robin Zimmerman read the write up on Kathy Ross, Iota Iota's Woman of the Year, and the Metro Atlanta (MAC) Woman of the Year. Sally Shuck presented to a surprised Helen Teboe the best program award. The chapter also won the best Ways and Means for MAC. Iota Iota had two Pledges of the Year, Jennifer Weber, and Jan Valencia. Sally Shuck was recognized for being the chapter advisor.

Iota Iota gives back part of their fundraising to the community besides some of the physical items we donate. Meals on Wheels, and 4H will be receiving funds along with a family that has fallen into hard times. In June the two scholarship winners will come to the June meeting to receive their scholarship. The scholarships are awarded to Union County students. At the close of the meeting hostess gifts were won by Carolyn Southard, Kathy Ross, Lois Wiley and Jeanee McJilton.

Iota Iota's new officers for 2024-25 are: President - Helen Teboe; Vice President - Kathy Ross; Recording Secretary - Jeanee McJilton; Treasurer - Robin Zimmerman; and Advisor - Sally Shuck.

If you would like to visit our chapter or learn more about Iota Iota sorority contact Kathy Ross, our Vice President at kfeross@gmail. Our next meeting will be on June 18th at Branan Lodge at 5:30 PM.

his flute along with a musical accompaniment of Green Day's "Time of Your Life." Burnett is a decorated flautist who has performed twice in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade.

The Class of 2024 experienced the unusual circumstance of a two-way tie for second place in GPA standings, so two students offered Salutatory Addresses during graduation.

Co-Salutatorian Ella Collins congratulated her classmates, thanked educators, and highlighted the role her friends and family have played in her personal success. She greatly credited her parents for "all of my success" and communicating that she could do whatever she wanted to do.

"To my fellow graduates, if no one has ever told you that you can do whatever you set out to accomplish, if no one has ever told you that you are smart, valuable and capable, let me be the one to tell you," Collins said. "With hard work and dedication, you all will succeed in life.

"To the parents and grandparents here today, I want to assure you of something. I have lately sensed a nationwide loss of hope in our future generation and a fear for the future of our country. Let me encourage you by saying that there is hope for and through our generation.

"My fellow graduates are talented, smart, hardworking, and kind young men and women with bright futures. I have witnessed these young adults encompass what it means to work hard and play hard."

In closing, Collins encouraged the graduating class to "make an effort to improve our character daily" and "not to take life too seriously," instead focusing on surrendering worry and practicing "gratitude for the blessings of life."

She drove this point home by quoting "the greatest man to ever live," Jesus Christ, who advised people to "not worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about itself."

Co-Salutatorian Lilly Wasko began with a message of gratitude for all staff at Union County High, her close friends, and her family "for their unwavering love and support."

Wasko infused humor into her speech, detailing the "important life lessons" she learned in high school, "like how to run from your parking spot behind the Fine Arts Center to (April) Krieger's classroom on the second floor with seconds to spare, so then Ms. Krieger never has to count you as tardy."

"In all seriousness, though, high school has taught me the importance of surrounding yourself with fulfilling individuals and creating meaningful connections with those close to you," Wasko said. "The people you surround yourself with should reflect the life you want to live.

"I think I can speak for everyone when I say we are only as good as the people we encompass ourselves with. Even though it might seem obvious, I feel the need to say it – be a good person with good people.

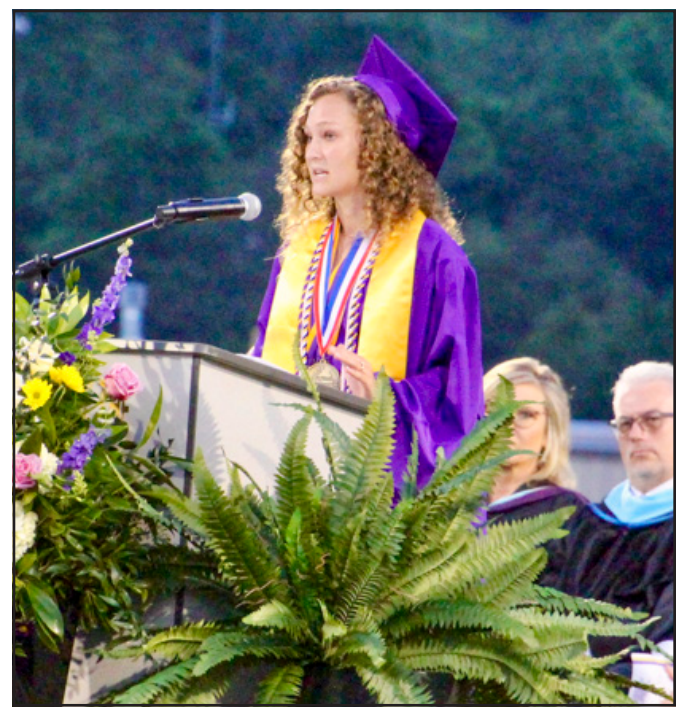

"Cherish the good people in your life while you have the chance. Plan ahead and genuinely treasure the time you spend with your loved ones, whether they be your closest friends or your family, because before we all know it, even after this evening, we will be embarking on a new journey and chapter of our lives.

"Not only has high school taught me the significance of heartfelt bonds, but the experience has taught me to stop worrying about trivial circumstances ... don't waste your time fussing over insignificant details; if you make a mistake, accept it, move on, and do better next time."

Valedictorian Ellie Adams also expressed thanks for "the ones who have helped me get to where I am today," listing her parents, siblings, and her Savior, Jesus Christ, "who has loved me relentlessly and never left my side."

"And last but not least, to the Class of 2024 – well, guys, we made it," Adams said, going on to admit that, having moved here in 10th grade, she struggled writing her speech because she "found it hard to know what to say to a group of my peers who I had not always grown up with."

"But then I had this thought; while I may not share all those amazing memories, I do get to share this moment with you," Adams said before transitioning to talking about feelings of being overwhelmed that she – and likely many of her classmates – had been experiencing in the busy runup to graduation.

"A couple of weeks ago, I suddenly had peace, and that's the peace I want to share with you tonight," she said. "As I sat in my car waiting for class to begin, God brought this realization to my mind; 365 times, in His Word, He tells me, 'Do not worry' – one for every day of the year, and I don't think that's a coincidence.

"The God of the universe tells me not to worry, He's got me. So, while we may not hold the same beliefs, that is the hope that I hold onto and the source of my peace. And as I sat there, suddenly, I could breathe again.

"So, as we gather together one last time to celebrate this monumental moment in our lives before charging into our futures, I encourage you to take a couple seconds and simply just breathe. Take a second to look around and remember.

"Take a moment away from the stress and busyness of this life and look at your friends and your family in the stands. Take this moment to silently thank them and thank God for gifting you this opportunity."

Following the Delivery of Diplomas, UCHS Principal Carol Knight gave her last Principal's Address prior to retirement at the end of this school year.

Knight noted how bright the future looks for graduates, who will be entering fields of health care, music and theatre, education, construction, the military, welding/fabrication, engineering, business/entrepreneurship, automotive, computer science, law, law enforcement, humanities, sciences, aviation, retail/customer service, electrical, ministry, cosmetology and beyond.

Upcoming UCHS Principal Josh Davis signaled for graduates to turn their tassels, and Superintendent John Hill made the graduation official by presenting the Class of 2024 to all in attendance.

Graduates Reese Chambers, Jase Hood and Isabella Serrano led those gathered in a singing of the Alma Mater, and UCHS 2024 Class President Natalie Payne closed out the ceremony with a special salute to her classmates on a job well done.

After the playing of the class song, "Free Bird" by Lynyrd Skynyrd, and the Class Video showcasing memories they had shared over the years, the graduates were treated to a massive fireworks display and a joyous reunion with family and friends.

in 2024, the county received an additional $1.042 million from the state that does not require the usual local match.

That's why the county contracted with Colditz for $2,276,384.65 to conduct this year's approved paving, with a local SPLOST contribution of $392,942 to secure the standard LMIG funds and provide "additional funding to get the roads complete that we wanted to this year."

In other county construction news, the new permanent bridge at Fisher Field Road has been finished and is in the concrete curing stage now. The Commissioner's Office expects the bridge to open by the middle of June or sooner.

remember the significant impact our small school has had in shaping who we are today," Marsh said, closing with congratulations to her classmates and adding, "May our futures be full of wild experiences, success and proud accomplishments."

Likewise, Salutatorian Webb thanked those in attendance as well as "all of my teachers, family and friends who have helped me reach this achievement." "In my experience, as long as you try your best at something, you can come away from it with very little regrets," Webb said. "Even if you were to get a suboptimal result, at least knowing you tried your best at it will give you some peace of mind."

In closing, Webb remarked that he simply did not have time enough to recount the "many more wonderful things

I could tell you about Woody Gap."

"So, I wish the rest of my graduating class the best of luck wherever their ventures may take them," Webb said.

The morning opened with a prayer by Cantrell and Sorrells leading the Pledge of Allegiance.

After Lee delivered the welcome address, Woody Gap Principal Wendy Reynolds stepped to the podium for the Recognition of Parents, wherein each student presented their parents with a rose as they stood to be recognized for 18 years of love, guidance and encouragement.

As they accepted their roses, Reynolds read the high school accolades of each senior, along with a personal thank you to each parent penned by their respective graduate.

Before Superintendent John Hill presented the outgoing seniors with their diplomas, attendees were treated to the Senior Video – a picture montage from the life of each graduate, featuring a song selected by each senior.

But before graduation hats and tassels were sent flying over the Falcons' logo at center court, the exercises concluded with the annual Candlelight Service, narrated by teacher Robert Hill. The service symbolizes the passing of the torch to the junior class, represented by Mia Roberts.

Earlier, during the Presentation of Scholarships, Reynolds praised the community for its integral role in raising $46,460 for the continued education of Woody Gap's Class of 2024.

"We would like to give a heartfelt thank you to all of our local scholarship donors," she said.

Donors include Appalachian Shrine Club, Band of Steel Scholarship, Bill Owens Memorial, Blue Ridge Mountain EMC, Budget Propane, Daughters of the American Revolution, Gaddistown Homemakers, Head Memorial, Paul McCullough, Run Above the Clouds, Suches Fire Department, United Community Bank, Union County Lions Club, Union County Schools Foundation, Woodman of the World Lodge 1180, Woody Gap Dispatch, Woody Gap Sports Club and Woody Gap Schools Foundation.

Congratulations to Alissa Renee Cantrell, Dixie Eleanor Lee, Jennifer Lindsay Marsh, James Benjamin Sorrells, Aidan Eugene Webb and Haylie Nicole Woody for graduating Saturday, May 25.
